

For years, Duane Morris has been recognized for our work in the construction and engineering sector, assisting clients in all legal and regulatory aspects of construction, engineering and related contracting. Our attorneys understand the full scope of issues involved in the design, development, financing, performance and management of major construction and engineering projects.

Duane Morris attorneys regularly represent public and private owners and developers, prime contractors and subcontractors, construction managers, equipment suppliers, architects/engineers and other design professionals, and sureties. Our experience includes work on complex, high-visibility projects in major cities across the United States and elsewhere around the world. Additionally, Duane Morris represents architects, engineers and other design professionals in contractual issues related to project delivery systems such as design-build, design-bid-build, fast-track or any combination, and advises on their relationships with owners, consultants, contractors or subcontractors during the pre-design, design, construction and post-construction phases.
